Pennant-winning Goldeyes approach playoffs with caution after record-breaking 60-win season ◐ Best-of-5 series starts tonight

Asked if this year's Winnipeg Goldeyes is the best team the club has ever fielded, Manager Rick Forney's voices his response without hesitation.

"Without a doubt," he said.

It's with that confidence — and an astonishing record of victories for the Fish this season, culminating in the team claiming the American Association's North Division pennant — that Forney leads his team into the start of playoffs versus the St. Paul Saints at home tonight.

Taking on St. Paul

- The Goldeyes take on the St. Paul Saints as the Fish head into the playoffs at Shaw Park tonight.

But despite an amazing regular season (60-40 in 100 games), Forney isn't about to let confidence get in the way of approaching the best-of-five series against the Saints with caution.

"Hopefully it ends up on a positive note, because I'd hate to see this group go out on a sour note," he said in a pre-playoffs press conference yesterday.

"(The Saints) go out there, they're going to play good defence ... hopefully we're going to be a step ahead."
STARTING PITCHER ACE WALKER

Forney has elected to start right-hander Ace Walker (3.37 ERA) on the mound tonight.

Walker holds the record for the most wins in franchise history.

"Ace is deserving," said Forney. "He's won ten games, he throws a ton of innings. He's durable, he's reliable, he's real good at home."

For his part, Walker said he doesn't consider a Goldeyes victory in the Saints series anywhere close to being a done deal.

"It's going to be tough competition," Walker said.

Old TVs pile up

Stations switch to digital today Thrift stores unable to take all the older televisions

ELISHA DACEY
@METRONEWS.CA

People wanting to donate their old, cathode-ray TV set after upgrading to a new TV in preparation for today's digital switchover take note: charities don't want them.

"We are being a bit more picky about the ones we take," said an employee at the MCC Furniture Thrift store on Keewaitin Street, who didn't give a name.

Older television sets that can't be upgraded to digital are starting to pile up at local thrift stores and electronic recycling depots, since they don't sell and people don't want them.

Advance Electronics Assistant Video Manager Dave Saifer said when people buy a new TV from them, they're given the option of being charged a recycling fee to take older sets away.

"I believe it costs $50 to $60 (to recycle the sets)," said Saifer. "Some people want to get rid of them, so they'll pay the fee. They can't give them away to family or friends, (relatives) don't want them."

Not all recycling places charge a fee, as long as the TV has come from a home.

A spokesperson for Miller Environmental Corp. said old television sets can be dropped off at their location on Hekla Avenue, Monday through Friday, for free as part of Manitoba's Electronic Round-Up recycling program.

However, transporting old TVs to a recycling place can take money out of most charity groups' already small budgets. Therefore, employees at MCC have taken to asking more questions about the TVs people want to donate, and they have a sign asking people not to drop off donations unattended.

"Since we pick up most of them ourselves, it's helpful to weed out the ones we can't sell."

ILLUSTRATION

▶ TVs are piling up at charities around Winnipeg as people upgrade to make the digital switchover.

Are you ready?

- Determine if your TV supports digital. The ones that do will have an input at the back marked "digital input." If it was built before 1998, it likely does not support digital. TVs built after 2004 likely do. The ones in between ... it's a toss up. Not sure? Check your owner's manual. Don't have it? Research it online.
- If your TV does not support digital, you have two choices — either purchase a new TV, buy a digital antennae or a digital converter box. A box will run you about $100.

TV sales stay steady

TV sales have been steady and haven't really picked up due to the impending switchover, says Advance Electronics Assistant Video Manager Dave Saifer.

However, Saifer says his store has received numerous phone calls about the switchover, mostly from rural Manitoba.

"Most people in Winnipeg ... they have no clue (about the upcoming switchover)," Saifer said. "They may have one digital TV in their home and a couple older TVs that aren't digital, and suddenly they're not going to work anymore."

Folks from outside the city, Saifer says, are either opting to completely upgrade or buying a digital antennae, available at home improvement stores.

Bat assault now a case of murder

- Out of 22 homicides this year, only three unsolved
- Number of youth charged with homicides climbs to 9

JAMES TURNER
@METRONEWS.CA

Two teens accused of beating a Winnipeg father with a baseball bat now face murder charges after the man died of his wounds.

The man and his 18-year-old daughter were attacked outside a Dufferin Avenue housing complex a week ago. Police say the man died in hospital Tuesday, prompting the rearrest of two 15-year-old boys already in custody in connection to the assault.

Police said the suspects were part of a group having a gang-related argument with another group that ended when everybody left. The teens are accused of targeting the man and his 18-year-old daughter when they came back to the area a few minutes later.

It appears the victims were simply innocent bystanders who were mistaken as being part of the gang fight, police suggested.

"They may have believed these individuals were part of that group," said Const. Jason Michalyshen.

And while it's impossible for police to predict homicides, Michalyshen said, the Chief's office is poring over each case this year to see if there's anything that might quell the violence.

Michalyshen said he was unaware of any plans to release a crime-prevention plan in the wake of this year's soaring homicide rate, like Edmonton has recently done.

He added, however, that the violence has raised concerns within the force to a "high level."

According to police, there have been 22 homicides in Winnipeg in 2011.

Transgender suing the city

A transgender woman who claims police officers yanked her from her car at gunpoint and mocked her because of her sexual orientation is suing the City of Winnipeg for allegedly breaching her rights against unlawful and unjustified detention.

Nikki Cox filed a statement of claim seeking damages against the city and police officials in Manitoba's Court of Queen's Bench Monday. The claim contains unproven allegations that have not been tested in court.

Cox, who is in her 30s, says she was out for a drive in the early morning of June 14 and pulled into the St. James Civic Centre's parking lot to have a cigarette.

A police helicopter appeared overhead, followed by squad cars. She alleges officers with guns drawn forced her out of the car and to the ground, kneed and handcuffed her.

"(I) could hear some officers talking in chuckling voices saying 'he's a trannie'."
QUOTE FROM LAWSUIT OF NIKKI COX

Her vehicle was searched and officers mistakenly believed someone else was inside, Cox states. She claims she was released, apologized to and told officers were investigating a break-in nearby. They apparently said she was "in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Cox is seeking undisclosed financial damages, claiming she suffered physical injuries, anxiety and humiliation, as well as for the alleged breaches of her charter rights. JAMES TURNER

Premier accused of lying about deficit

One way or another, Premier Greg Selinger is lying about his NDP government's plan to eliminate the province's spending deficit by 2014, Progressive Conservative Leader Hugh McFadyen said yesterday.

"Is he lying about balancing the budget by 2014 or is he lying about his plans to raise taxes? It's one or the other," McFadyen said.

McFadyen promised unequivocally that if elected, a Conservative government would not raise existing taxes, introduce new ones or hike user fees.

But any new major tax cuts also might not be in the cards. McFadyen did say he might raise the basic personal exemption. Manitoba, he loves to note, has the highest provincial income taxes west of Quebec.

McFadyen also offered what he calls 'targeted tax measures' to help families and stimulate the economy.

Caregivers beware as teen girl lured on Facebook: Police

City police are urging caregivers to carefully monitor kids' online activity after a Winnipeg man was arrested for allegedly attempting to lure a young girl on Facebook.

The suspect, 45, was arrested after a search at his North Kildonan home Tuesday morning.

Police said they seized evidence from the scene, but didn't elaborate further.

"There's no question the parent did absolutely the right thing."
CONST. JASON MICHALYSHEN, WINNIPEG POLICE DEPARTMENT

The man and a 13-year-old girl he once knew from a business he formerly worked at began chatting on Facebook between January and March.

The chats became inappropriate and the girl's mother became aware of what was happening and called police.

"There's no question the parent did absolutely the right thing," said Const. Jason Michalyshen.

She was "very alert, very astute" to what appeared to be happening between the man and the minor, he said.

The suspect is not alleged to have ever had physical contact with the child and was not in a position of trust over her, said police.

He is facing charges of Internet luring to commit sexual assault and luring to commit sexual interference.

He will appear in domestic violence court Oct. 17 after being released on a promise to appear there.

Michalyshen cautioned that sometimes, what seem like innocent interactions between kids and adults can grow criminal.

"A lot of times there is a grooming process," he said.

INVESTIGATION

Human remains identified

The human remains found by volunteer searchers have been positively identified as those of Nancy Joy Swenty.

Swenty, 33, a resident of Fischer Branch, was reported missing on July 28. Her vehicle was found in the Fraserwood area three days later.

Volunteers on a search found the remains on Saturday.

RCMP say a team of searchers were combing an area south east of Poplar Field, MB at about 6 p.m. when they came upon a black Co-op jacket along the roadway. RCMP were called in.

An autopsy was conducted Tuesday.

The cause of death is not being released, however it is being treated as a homicide, said RCMP.

The woman's family asked RCMP to relay the following: "We would like to thank all of the searchers who spent countless hours to bring Nancy home." Media have also been asked to respect the family's privacy.

Bogus NHL Winnipeg Jets jerseys crashed and burned at the Canadian border.

Mounties and Canada Border Services Agency seized a shipment of counterfeit jerseys bearing the newest NHL team's logo and shoulder flashes last week.

The jerseys did not have players names or numbers on them.

Police estimate the retail value of the goods would have been about $12,000.

RCMP advise the public to purchase team products through authorized dealers.

No charges have been laid so far, although RCMP have not ruled out the possibility.

A spokesperson for the RCMP said they expect to seize more fake jerseys as they come across the border, especially as it draws nearer to the first game.

Even in death Jack boosts NDP

New poll ties party with Tories ◐ Liberals trail far behind ◐ Pollster asks: Can NDP consolidate gains?

Jack Layton's untimely death has triggered another orange wave across the country, a new poll suggests.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey pegs support for Layton's NDP at 33 per cent — tied with the ruling Conservatives and well ahead of the Liberals at 21 per cent.

That's almost a three-point gain for the New Democrats since the May 2 election, which vaulted the party into official Opposition status.

The Tories are down almost seven points, the Liberals are up two.

Harris-Decima chairman Allan Gregg said the NDP gain is most likely attributable to "the Jack effect." "The national outpouring of emotion we witnessed over Jack Layton's untimely death appears to have translated directly into increased support for the party he leaves behind," Gregg said.

Layton died Aug. 22 after a battle with an undisclosed form of cancer.

Ousted twice, he's back — and busted

A fugitive who was deported from Canada twice, returned and appeared on the government's most-wanted list, has been arrested in Toronto.

Public Safety Minister Vic Toews said yesterday Wasford Uriah Steer was arrested Monday.

Steer, 39, was last deported to Jamaica in 2000.

Toews said it's not known when, where or how he returned to Canada, adding he could have used a fake passport.

"He could have come in under someone else's passport and could have been here the day after he left,'' Toews said in Regina.

"This guy's quite creative," he added.

Toews said Toronto police picked up Steer on other charges and then found he was wanted by the Canada Border Services Agency.

The agency said Steer, who has five known aliases, is in Canada illegally after he was convicted of various crimes, including possession of counterfeit money, assault causing bodily harm and assault with a weapon.

Toews acknowledged it's tough to keep people like Steer out of the country if they use fake travel documents.

Facial recognition software might be one possibility, he suggested.

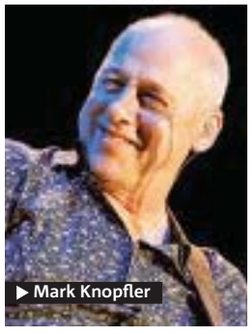
Council drops ban on Money for Nothing

Dire Straits song now 'may be acceptable'
Radio stations free to play 1985 hit again

MARIO VEDDER/THE CANADIAN PRESS



▶ Mark Knopfler

A Canadian broadcast watchdog says its decision to deem a 1985 Dire Straits smash unfit for radio just ain't workin'.

The Canadian Broadcast Standards Council has tempered a ruling on Money For Nothing, which includes the word "faggot," saying that while the homophobic slur in the song is inappropriate, it must be taken in context and that individual radio stations can decide what listeners want to hear.

"(The council) is only saying that there may be circumstances in which even words designating unacceptably negative portrayal may be acceptable because of their contextual usage" states the decision, released yesterday.

So, what changed since the council made its original decision?

The song's writer, Mark Knopfler, has long maintained that he was writing from the perspective of a "bonehead" whom he observed in a hardware store watching MTV, reacting with disgust to the fledgling network's flamboyant rock stars.

The council simply hadn't taken such context into account when making its original decision, said the organization's national chair Ron Cohen. But with that information in hand, the majority of the council's panel felt the word was intended satirically and not in a hateful manner.

"(The context) wasn't as evident without the explanations that have been provided," Cohen said in a telephone interview.

UNIVERSITY 101: A COURSE OF MISDIRECTION

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO

Another university year is beginning, so post-secondary students are about to learn important "life lessons" that will stay with them long after they've forgotten what Pi is (it's a number).

So that I might save you from the high cost of tuition, books, and 55 metric tonnes of Mr. Noodles, here they are:

Condoms are king: Welcome to university, the only organization that gets away with putting a prophylactic in its orientation kit. This would be less well received at, say, Microsoft. Nary a frosh week organizer will pass up the opportunity to offer you a free condom. "Hi, I'm the leader of the Fundamentalist Christian Fellowship," they'll say. "Would you like a Trojan?"

High school has not prepared you: Real university preparation courses would only upset parents, because they would have names like, "101 things to do with your surplus condoms" and "Beggars CAN be choosers: Getting the most from your local soup kitchen."

No one cares about you: In Grade 12, your teacher listened patiently as you explained your poor mark was because the exchange student, Olaf Gooberson, rejected your advances. In university, your professor will sympathize with you only in select circumstances, such as if you are actively dead. Even then, she'll expect a doctor's note.

Textbooks are not your friend: The average university textbook weighs more than the average student, and that weight is both physical and emotional. For many of you, this purchase will be the first time you've ever gone into a store with a big wad of money, paid for something that was still in its plastic wrap, and not felt good about it. Fortunately they're a good value because humans are genetically incapable of throwing away textbooks, which will live on as doorstops and window jams until you die.

Students are (very) amateur philosophers: Like a 10-year-old who learns a new swear word, many university students learn a few simple philosophical concepts and can't stop spouting them. For instance, you will hear "How do I know anything is real?" multiple times. If you hear anybody say that, slap them. If they complain, explain that the pain is not real, but rather a byproduct of humanity's inability to perceive time. Then hit them again. For me.

University is just another step: When I was graduating, choosing community college over university was seen by teachers as a career move only slightly better than holding up a convenience store. Between the hype and the price, university no doubt seems like the be-all and end-all. But it's not.

The important thing to remember is, no matter how you do, and no matter what happens over the next four years, you will never, ever run out of condoms, obsolete textbooks, or tired philosophical catchphrases.

Some people also collect memories and knowledge, if you're into that sort of thing.

Worth Mentioning

MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. Poet Maya Angelou says the way a quote from Martin Luther King Jr. was paraphrased on his new memorial in Washington makes the civil rights leader sound like an "arrogant twit."

Angelou, who consulted on the memorial, told The Washington Post that the shortened version sounds egotistical and should be changed.

The phrase is from a speech shortly before King's assassination in 1968 in which he talked about how people should remember him.

In the original, King starts by saying, "If you want to say that I was a drum major, say that I was a drum major for justice," King told the congregation. "Say that I was a drum major for peace. I was a drum major for righteousness. And all of the other shallow things will not matter."

All that is condensed on King's memorial as "I was a drum major for justice, peace and righteousness."

"The 'if' clause that is left out is salient. Leaving it out changes the meaning completely," Angelou told The Washington Post. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Frustrated with the "ridiculous" lack of parking on campus, a Dalhousie University professor has quit his job.

Dan Middlemiss, an expert in Canadian defence policy and professor in the political science department, said he decided to leave his job of 30 years because he had to arrive on campus hours before his first class to snag a spot in oversold lots.

"It's just silly. It's been 30 years of frustration," said Middlemiss, adding he made his final decision Monday after waiting hours in line to buy a parking pass only to be told he would have to come back the next day.

He said he always had to drive from home in Lower Sackville at around 7 a.m. to secure a parking spot for his 2:30 p.m. class.

There are just 2,000 parking spaces on the Halifax campus for 17,000 students and 3,000 employees, a predicament Middlemiss called "ridiculous."

Last year, the university oversold the number of parking passes by 65 per cent. But this year it aims to oversell by only 30 per cent. At the same time, the university has turned 184 general parking spots into reserved spots. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

JARED STORY
METRO WINNIPEG

Ed Gass-Donnelly understands the power of music. The Toronto filmmaker wrote Small Town Murder Songs — a tale of crime and redemption in rural Ontario — around a Canadian indie rock record.

"Small Town Murder Scene, that record had an influence on the look, feel and tone of the movie," says Gass-Donnelly, speaking of a 2003 album by Toronto band the FemBots.

However, the FemBots are nowhere to be heard in Murder Songs, which stars Peter Stomare, best known for shoving Steve Buscemi into a woodchipper in Fargo.

Gass-Donnelly felt the songs were too similar to Stormare's understated performance and the film's overall subtle style.

"If the story and images have a gentle pace then to have a similar soundtrack just ended up making it too passive, so I felt like I needed something more abrasive and aggressive," says the 34-year-old movie maker, who Variety recently named to its 10 Directors to Watch list.

Instead, Gass-Donnelly used music from Toronto group Bruce Peninsula. The band's pounding drums, ethereal vocals and gospel-rock sound stands in stark contrast to the stifling small Mennonite town setting.

"The music already has this strong religious presence so I found I didn't need to talk about religion," says Gass-Donnelly.

"I felt like the music portrayed the weight of religion in the movie without the characters ever speaking about it directly."

Interestingly, the film — which also features Winnipeg actor Stephen Eric MacIntyre and the late Jackie Burroughs (who played Hetty King in Road to Avonlea) in her final performance — doesn't use a traditional score, keeping the songs to scene shifts separate from the storyline.

"This movie felt like it needed a lot of naturalism, silence and space, and I respected the music too much to sweep it under the rug," says Gass-Donnelly.

"I felt if I'm going to use music in the film it has to punch you in the face or not be there at all."

Small Town Murder Songs screens at Cinematheque tonight, Friday and Saturday.

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors.

All shows are at 9 p.m.

Despite suicide, Bravo going ahead with Housewives premiere

The Bravo network said yesterday it is going ahead with the Labour Day season premiere of The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills despite the suicide of a cast member's husband.

Brief interviews with cast members about the suicide of Russell Armstrong will precede the premiere, although Armstrong's widow, Taylor — one of the Real Housewives — did not participate. The network will also air several suicide prevention public service announcements during the show, said Frances Berwick, Bravo Media president.

Armstrong hanged himself on Aug. 15. He left no note.

The couple's marital strife was a story line in the reality show's first season.

In the second season premiere, filmed months ago, Taylor Armstrong tells the other housewives that she and her husband are going to therapy.

Berwick said the season's new episodes are in the process of being edited.

She didn't specify exactly what was being done, but it will likely be to give less attention to the marital problems.

"Our thoughts continue to be with the Armstrong family during this difficult time," Berwick said in a statement.

The Real Housewives franchise is one of the key factors in Bravo's success as a cable network.

A love rekindling for Biel and Timberlake?

Former flames spotted dining and enjoying a leisurely bike ride in Toronto ▶ Rumours are stirring that Timberlake and Jessica Biel may not be over for good.

Jessica Biel and Justin Timberlake put an end to their relationship back in March, but now there's speculation that their breakup might not stick, according to Hollyscoop.

Biel and Timberlake were spotted recently sharing brunch and a leisurely bike ride in Toronto, where Biel is currently filming.

"They were in good spirits," an eyewitness says. "They seemed happy. They had brunch together. They were talking. They enjoyed their food. They had a nice time."

But even if the pair are rekindling their flame, don't expect Timberlake to get too talkative about it.

"In my 30 years, she is the most special person," he told Vanity Fair in June.

"I don't want to say much more, because I have to protect things that are dear to me — for instance, her." METRO

Lady Gaga busts out her inner dude

Lady Gaga apparently went to great lengths to become her male alter-ego, Jo Calderone, at the MTV Video Music Awards.

Along with a suit, five o'clock shadow and a pair of men's underwear, the Born this Way singer reportedly donned a prosthetic penis underneath her manly ensemble to complete the overall illusion, according to Us Weekly.

Actress Blake Lively made quite the hefty trek for a belated birthday dinner with her rumored boyfriend Leonardo DiCaprio.

The actress reportedly flew to Australia, where he's filming the Great Gatsby, according to Us Weekly.

Sources say the famous pair shared a romantic dinner in Sydney to toast Lively's 24th birthday.

It was something of a whirlwind trip, though, as sources report that the Gossip Girl starlet was back hard at work in New York by Tuesday. METRO

Biebs has first fender-bender

Justin Bieber reached another milestone — his first ever reported fender-bender.

The 17-year-old singer's black Ferrari reportedly collided with a Honda Civic in an underground parking lot compound, according to reports in the L.A. Times.

The famous mop-topped entertainer was behind the wheel at the time of the collision, according to reports.

"No one was injured and there was no damage to either vehicle," the LAPD said in a statement released shortly after. METRO

Canadian fashion blog The Coveteur is taking a peek into the dressers, drawers, closets and safes of ladies and gents in the frontline of the fashion industry

Site brings style savvy out of the closet

A moniker marrying the words "covet" and "voyeur" seems fitting for a site offering glimpses into people's closets, but there's much more to homegrown fashion blog The Coveteur than a series of random snapshots.

The Canadian trio behind the buzzworthy blog is keen on capturing intimate portraits of personal style within a cosy, familiar environment typically beyond the glare of the spotlight.

Since launching this year, The Coveteur has won fans with its photographic profiles of the stylish private spaces of notable names, as well as those working behind the scenes in the fashion world.

"I think people are all voyeurs. Everyone wants behind-the-scenes access," said designer Erin Kleinberg, one of the founders.

"People are visual and they want to see imagery, and they want to see exclusive content, for sure."

Street style was a huge influence for Kleinberg and stylist Stephanie Mark, but both wanted to take the concept one step further.

Rather than strictly chronicling what people were wearing, they came up with the idea of adopting a more personal approach: going into individuals' homes to peruse and capture snapshots of the clothes, accessories and prized keepsakes adorning their closets.

"Once we started shooting, the element of environment really came into play then," Mark said. "We realized the environment was just as much about a person as their clothing... they kind of really complement each other."

Rounding out the Toronto trio is photographer Jake Rosenberg. The team had previously collaborated on one of Kleinberg's lookbooks shot by Rosenberg and styled by Mark.

For someone accustomed to shooting fashion on figures, Rosenberg said the notion of capturing images of closets was an entirely new concept.

In certain cases, the process turned out to be a revelation of sorts for the subjects themselves, he noted.

"A lot of people say after we've gone through their closet, 'Oh my God, I totally forgot that I had all this stuff in there,'" Rosenberg said.

The Coveteur has embarked on a special collaboration with luxury retailer Holt Renfrew, including a lookbook showcasing fall designer footwear, a photo exhibit featuring the closets of resident tastemakers, and dedicated window installations at locations across the country.

The boys behind Canadian couture line Greta Constantine team up with leather garment all-star Danier

AARON VINCENT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kirk Pickersgill and Stephen Wong already have their hands full crafting luxurious ready-to-wear for women as well as a separate line devoted to men's looks.

But when Danier came calling, the Toronto-based design duo behind Greta Constantine couldn't pass up the opportunity of a homegrown collaboration with the leather goods retailer – not to mention putting their stamp on another apparel line.

"We met with them and discussed the possibilities," said Wong in a recent interview at a Danier location in Toronto's Yorkdale Shopping Centre.

"And we came up with this approach to taking a similar approach to what we have with our Greta Constantine label, which is this kind of ease and effortlessness, and adapted it to leather."

Dubbed "jersey boys" for their embrace and use of the fluid knit fabric, Pickersgill and Wong have earned their share of attention within style circles for their broad range of offerings over the years, from sleek outerwear to draped, Grecian-inspired garments. The Greta Constantine label name comes from the combination of Wong's mother's name and Pickersgill's grandfather's name.

Canadian supermodel Coco Rocha and singer Nelly Furtado are among those who have been spotted in looks from their signature Greta Constantine line. The Toronto-born Rocha, who was raised in Richmond, B.C., even walked the runway last October in their spring 2011 collection showcase. Their men's line, Ezra Constantine, was introduced in 2009.

With the launch of the capsule collection, Greta Constantine Skin for Danier, Pickersgill and Wong are hoping to expand the reach and awareness of their growing brand.

"It's such a great opportunity because a lot of our mainline collection is in a price point that might be inaccessible to most," said Wong. "And even though these are leather (pieces), they're actually in a certain price point, which is much more accessible. And it's just nice to be able to have that reach, and that kind of availability also." THE CANADIAN PRESS

The clothing

- Steeped in a colour palette encompassing hues like black, eggplant and slate grey, suede pieces include a scarf-vest, asymmetrical wrap-bomber and long wrap coat.
- Leather garments feature shift dresses and coats in both a cocoon silhouette and a three-quarter-style car coat.

A BATHTUB IN THE BEDROOM — YAY OR NAY?

When listing 12 things she can't live without for ELLE's August decor issue, Gwyneth Paltrow included a fancy bathtub in the middle of her bedroom, without an ounce of irony.

Celeb journalists rolled their eyes like, "That's just Gwyneth being all Gwyneth." But in actuality, the bedroom bathtub has become very trendy in interior decor land. We weigh the pros and cons.

THINKSTOCK.COM

▶ The bed and bath situation in this photo is so 10 years ago.

PROS

When you're tired after a long day at work, you can literally roll right out of the bathtub and into the bed.

- When your eyes are still groggy from the night's sleep, you can literally roll right out of bed and into the bathtub.
- Those special date nights could be twice as fun.

CONS

Your bedroom will have that damp, yucky, steamy feeling.

- Um, hello, mildew?
- All that rolling out of bed and into the bath will make you lazy.
- You'll essentially be sleeping in the bathroom.

Dear Charles the Butler, What kind of sheets should I buy for my master bed, how many do I need and how often do I need to change my bed sheets?
Diane B.

Dear Diane B.,

First, when you go shopping I don't want you to worry or stress about thread count.

Feel the sheets and remember the fabric has "sizing" (a combination of light glue and starch which makes them stiff so they look nice in the retail store), so you really need to buy one sheet, wash it and sleep with it.

Myself, I like sheets with "percale" in the summer — this is a closely woven smooth finish cotton.

In the winter I love flannel sheets, and the best part of flannel for me is that they are warm on cold nights and don't need to be ironed!

Once you find a brand of sheets you like, you should have a minimum of two sets, and if budget allows a third. This way you have one set that is dirty, one on the bed and an emergency backup set for spills, dogs, kids, life etc.

And finally in a perfect world bed sheets should be changed weekly.

Remember the human body sweats a litre of liquid per night and the exfoliation of dead skin all accumulates in your bed and bacteria/mites love to feed on this.

Price Kendall has made more than Goldeyes fans sit up and take notice.

The 26-year-old Winnipeg Goldeyes second baseman was named Rookie of the Year by the American Association yesterday.

Kendall, who is in his second year with the Fish, retained his rookie status since he had no professional experience prior to joining the team. Kendall played in every regular home game this season.

Kendall's stats were impressive, said Goldeyes manager Rick Forney, including a .324 batting average, a team-leading 135 hits, two home runs, 54 RBIs, 22 bases stolen and 83 runs scored, also a team-leading stat.

'We've lost a lot in the last three months'

NHL left reeling after Wade Belak found dead, the third player to die since May League had already lost Derek Boogaard and Rick Rypien

The NHL's summer of sadness continued yesterday after recently retired player Wade Belak was found dead in Toronto, becoming the third enforcer to die in a harrowing span of four months. He was 35.

Belak's body was discovered at a downtown Toronto hotel and condo complex in the early afternoon. Specific details of his death were not immediately available.

The news struck a tragic chord around the hockey world, especially after the recent deaths of New York Rangers forward Derek Boogaard and Winnipeg Jets forward Rick Rypien.

"As everyone knows there have been some real losses that we've experienced over the years, but it never seemed like there was three in a row like this," said Pat Quinn, who coached Belak when he played in Toronto. "Anybody that's around this game, you feel like it's part of your big family, and that includes the fans and all the people that support these players and get to know them. We've lost a lot in the last three months.

"You don't replace it. You just hope the ones that are left behind can live through it and be all right."

Like Rypien and Boogaard, Belak largely made his living with his fists. He fought 136 times during an NHL career that spanned 14 seasons, according to hockeyfights.com.

The string of incidents has raised uncomfortable questions about a possible link between the difficult role each man played in the NHL and his untimely death.

"We're talking about such a short period of time," said Craig Button, who was the general manager of the Calgary Flames when Belak played there early in his career. "It's not only about the deaths, it's the deaths that surround similar type players. ...

"It's not just getting hit in the head, it's everything that goes with that (enforcer) role."

Belak was popular among the media off the ice because of his friendly, easy-going demeanour.

He spent parts of three seasons with the Predators prior to retiring over the summer. Belak was scheduled to work on Nashville's television broadcasts this coming year and had recently travelled to Toronto to be a contestant on the CBC show "Battle of the Blades." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hargreaves headed to Manchester City

MICHAEL REGAN/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Owen Hargreaves

Manchester City made Owen Hargreaves the most unexpected signing of the summer transfer window when the injury-plagued midfielder joined on a one-year deal.

The Canadian-born Hargreaves was released by English champion Manchester United at the end of last season after failing to complete a match in three years because of knee, shoulder and hamstring trouble.

However, the 30-year-old former England midfielder has proved his fitness to City, where he will likely be a backup to Netherlands international Nigel de Jong in the big-spending club's star-studded squad.

Hargreaves, who was born in Calgary, is City manager Roberto Mancini's sixth summer signing — and could be a shrewd one if he manages to avoid any more injuries that have derailed a career that peaked during the 2006 World Cup when he was arguably England's best performer in Germany. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pospisil keeps Canada's U.S. Open hopes alive

Vasek Pospisil is starting to feel like he belongs among the world's top tennis players.

The native of Vernon, B.C., won the first Grand Slam match of his career yesterday by crushing Lukas Rosol 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 to reach the second round of the U.S. Open.

Pospisil needed just 82 minutes to dispatch the Czech after converting on seven of 13 break point chances.

"This is my second slam, so I'm still new to the scene," he said. "It takes a little bit of getting comfortable with these guys.

"In the past maybe it wasn't like that for me. But that is changing fast. I feel like I belong out there."

He'll face No. 25 seed Feliciano Lopez in the second round. The Spaniard was a quarter-finalist at Wimbledon in July.

"He will be tough, they're all tough at this level," said Pospisil, who is ranked 143rd in the world. "But I've been playing well for the last couple of months so I'm looking forward to it. I'm confident."

The 21-year-old is coming off a win over Argentine Juan Chela at the Rogers Cup earlier this month. He exited the Montreal tournament with a second-round loss to Roger Federer.

STYLISH. SEXY. DELICIOUS.
WINES OF URUGUAY

Sandwiched between two giants, Argentina and Brazil, diminutive Uruguay is a vibrant place to explore. The people are friendly and passionate, mainly of Spanish and Italian origin, making conversations and traditions lively and fun.

Although it receives scant attention from the rest of the world, Uruguay has a wine region to be proud of. In the southern part of the country, near the capital of Montevideo and bordering the estuary of the Rio de la Plata, the climate is moderate and maritime, similar to France's Bordeaux. Similar, too, are the grapes grown.

The wine industry has been alive for over 250 years in Uruguay, but it wasn't until the 1870s that the flagship grape Tannat was introduced. Tannat adapted beautifully to the chalky soil and the Mediterranean climate and produces a full bodied bold red wine that we at Hermanos think is delicious.

We serve it with steak - and style.
